The Olds Chamber of Commerce is holding a trivia contest to celebrate 2015, its 20th year of existence and the public is invited to participate.

The contest will run from July 6 to Sept. 24.

Participants will be asked to answer trivia questions about the chamber, which will be published in the Albertan and other news media platforms.

Participants will be eligible for weekly prizes provided by Olds and area businesses.

The grand prize draw, for a basket with prizes also provided by local businesses, will be made Sept. 24 during the chamber's annual Business Beer and Blue Jeans event, which will be held at Tracks Pub this year. As always, the nominees for various chamber business awards will be announced during that event as well.

Chamber president Doug Rieberger says trivia needed to answer the various questions will be found on several media platforms, including the Albertan and a Facebook page that's being set up for the chamber.

He stresses the contest is free.

"The only thing they have to do is just fill out their ballot; fill in their question and they can either email the ballot in or they can drop it off at either the Town of Olds (building) or the town library," he says. that the chamber has participated in with-

"Everybody can enter it, answer the weekly trivia question, and have a chance to win a weekly prize and then everybody gets to go in for the grand prize at the end of the contest."

If entrants want to email their answers, they should send them to Chambercontest@oldsalberta.com.

There are questions about everything from when the chamber was first formed right up to significant milestones within the chamber, significant events, etc.,

the various awards the chamber gives out during the year.

Rieberger says the contest is open to anybody.

"Everybody can enter it, answer the weekly trivia question, and have a chance to win a weekly prize and then everybody gets to go in for the grand prize at the end of the contest," he says.

Rieberger says the contest isn't the only way the chamber is celebrating its 20th anniversary.

"We will have some different things that are going to be going on, tied in with the business awards banquet," he says. "As well, there will be stuff posted on our website and other media platforms about different things that are happening throughout the year."

For more information check out the chamber's website. Rieberger says that address is Oldsalberta.com.
